

Golden Whistler Pachycephala pectoralis

When to look:

Migrates to lowlands in winter; breeds Aug to Feb

White throat

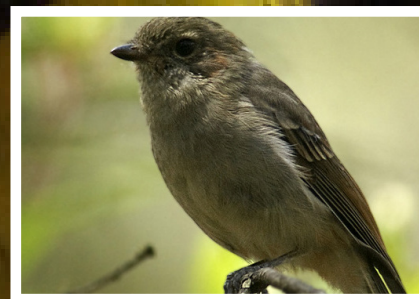

Olive-green back and wings

Similar species:

Mangrove Golden Whistler (Pachycephala melanura): the male has brighter underparts than the Golden Whistler, has a broader collar, and a slightly shorter tail. The female has yellowish underparts. It also has a longer beak and is only found in the mangroves of coastal northern Australia.

Adult male:
Bright yellow underody

Adult female:
Grey upperparts with pale olive tinge

Images courtesy of David Cook Wildlife Photography